

Amended specification

It is a new method of packing and presentation of ice-cream, desserts and the likes in the form of scoops. The packing contains two containers one outer and another inner. The inner container holds the product in the form of the scoop and the inner container is peelable, which can be peeled off to expose the product for consumption. This technique has been described in detailed herein and illustrated by way of specific examples. Those who skill in the relevant art of Agronomy will understand the invention. The invention, as defined in the claims, covers all modifications, equivalents, and alternatives which will fall within the circle of present invention.

Claims

1. The method of packing and presentation of products like ice-cream, desserts and the likes in the form of scoops.
2. According to claim 1, the packing contains two containers one outer and another inner.
3. According to claim 1 and 2, the inner container holds the product in the form of the scoop.
4. According to claim 2, the inner container is peelable, which can be peeled off to expose the product for consumption.
5. According to claim 2, the outer container serves as the serving container for the ice cream or dessert.
6. According to claim 3, the shape of the scoop depends upon the inner shape provided to the inner surface of the inner container.
7. According to claim 1, the product is served in the outer container in which the shape of the